

SoulPain

soul coaching in times of crisis

Some transitions in life can be so painful, that it feels like the soul is aching.

If you are there, but look to repair something, please go and see a therapist or psychologist. I'm here for those who want to know who they are, for those who crave to use the power of the pain for self revelation.

A part of your past dies, and it's a part in which you up until now had "good investments". So it can even feel like dying (break down) and it is painful – but it is actually not your soul that is in pain, it just feels like that. If your inner craving goes in the direction of "how can I mend this, how can I fix this", I'm not the guy for you. But if your inner craving screams something like "who am I?" in all this turmoil, yes then we might fit.

I've spend decades with enlightened masters, musicians and artists, therapists and healers, mediums and people of many "normal" walks of life. Along the line it got clear that one of my skills is being there like a dear good old friend in times of utter despair. And to guide you through, to whatever next level you need to reach. If you like to give this support a name, "soul coaching" could be it.

My work is to get you more and more in contact with whatever you consider higher intelligence. Some call it the innocent genius, some the knowing field. However esoteric this sounds, I suppose you have an idea what is meant. Where will you come out? I have no clue. Break through follows break down but it's utterly your life's responsibility where you go after such a time of transition. Life after such a transition is like a rebirth, anew. But like any birth, the time of Joy comes after the Pain.

I'm there for you and with you in whatever form and time we find appropriate.

I choose to work with those who have already proven a talent in using their energies in some field/s of life. In one way or the other you are a successful person. My fees are accordingly high. So is my commitment.
